Windham College Announces Drive for $10,000,000 Campus

Long-Range Program Calls For Sixteen Buildings

PUTNEY - Windham College campus is in the rabbit, providing a former canvas today. A new building will change this. With a long-range expansion plan and a $10,000,000 campaign, the dream of a new Windham College campus is in the making.

The campaign, which has already raised $5,000,000, is planned for a new campus on 160 acres of land located in the Putney area. The new campus will include 16 buildings, including a new library, science building, art building, and student center.

The campaign will also fund a new dormitory, a new dining hall, and a new dining hall. The new campus will be completed in 1965, and will have a capacity of 1,000 students.

Chase Heads Committee

Dr. Walter Johnson, head of the Windham College campus, has announced the formation of the Windham College campus Development Committee. The committee will be headed by Dr. Johnson and will consist of 20 members, including faculty, students, and alumni.

The committee will be responsible for raising the $5,000,000 needed to complete the new campus.

Chase Heads Committee

Edward Q. Chase, head of the Windham College campus, has announced the formation of the Windham College campus Development Committee. The committee will be headed by Dr. Johnson and will consist of 20 members, including faculty, students, and alumni.

The committee will be responsible for raising the $5,000,000 needed to complete the new campus.

College Opened With Three Students in 1951

On Dec. 31, 1951, Dr. Walter Johnson opened the new Windham College campus in Putney, Vermont. The campus had been planned for several years, and the first students arrived in 1951.

The campus was originally founded as a boarding school, and it was intended to provide a rigorous academic program for students from across the United States.

The campus has seen significant growth since its opening, and it now serves as a liberal arts college with a focus on environmental studies.

In addition to the new Windham College campus, the college also operates the Windham College Preparatory School, which serves as a residential boarding school for students from across the United States.

The Windham College campus is located in the heart of Vermont, and it provides a serene and peaceful atmosphere for students to focus on their studies.

The campus is also home to a number of environmental programs, including a sustainable food program and a renewable energy program.

College Opened With Three Students in 1951

On Dec. 31, 1951, Dr. Walter Johnson opened the new Windham College campus in Putney, Vermont. The campus had been planned for several years, and the first students arrived in 1951.

The campus was originally founded as a boarding school, and it was intended to provide a rigorous academic program for students from across the United States.

The campus has seen significant growth since its opening, and it now serves as a liberal arts college with a focus on environmental studies.

In addition to the new Windham College campus, the college also operates the Windham College Preparatory School, which serves as a residential boarding school for students from across the United States.

The Windham College campus is located in the heart of Vermont, and it provides a serene and peaceful atmosphere for students to focus on their studies.

The campus is also home to a number of environmental programs, including a sustainable food program and a renewable energy program.